Prophetic Voices From the Margins

As Christendom fades and the church finds itself increasingly on the margins of society many are finding inspiration and resources from marginal traditions in the past – the Celtic churches, the Anabaptist movement and a new expression of monasticism.

This day conference will provide an opportunity to explore these traditions and the insights they offer into what it means to be prophetic and to follow Jesus today.

We welcome Roy and Stuart back to Northern Ireland for this Day Conference.

Roy Searle is no stranger to Northern Ireland, having most recently led several seminars at New Horizon in August 2012. He is one of the founder leaders of the Northumbria Community and has church planted and ministered in two urban churches. He is currently involved in a missional church plant in a rural context. A popular speaker, Roy works across many church traditions in areas of leadership, spiritual direction, culture and change, missional living, community building and story telling. He and the Northumbria Community have been involved with people and initiatives in Northern Ireland for many years.

Stuart Murray Williams spent twelve years as an urban church planter in Tower Hamlets (East London). For the past 11 years he has been a trainer and consultant, with particular interest in urban mission, church planting and emerging forms of church. He is chair of the Anabaptis Network and the founder of Urban Expression, a pioneering urban church planting agency with teams in several cities in the UK and in The Netherlands. His writings include The Power of All: Building a Multivoiced Church, Post-Christendom: Church and Mission in a Strange New World, Church after Christendom, Changing Mission, Planting Churches: A Framework for Practitioners and The Naked Anabaptist.
