

JUST LIVING — SIMPLY —

“The trouble with simple living is that, though it can be joyful, rich, and creative, it isn’t simple.”

- Doris Janzen Longacre

How do we escape the economic trappings of western consumerism to live just lives of simplicity, generosity and hospitality while being aware of our responsibilities to others in our local community and the wider world?

This practical workshop will draw upon local experiences to explore how we can:

- Live within our fair share of the world's resources and limits;
- Respond to poverty and inequality with radical generosity;
- Live restoratively through sacrificial relationships,
- Use our power to speak prophetically to our churches and wider society in order to cultivate a healthier relationship between God, people and creation.
